

Mbeja Lomotey

Mbeja Lomotey is a second year student in the Masters of Science Public Health program at Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee. While at Meharry, he has beautifully balanced a 4.0 grade point average with active participation in Division of Public Health Student Association (DPHSA) and the only student member of both the Human Resources Search and Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH) Advisory Board Committees. In addition, he has volunteered in the community with organizations like Nashville Cares, Hands On Atlanta and Habitat for Humanity. Next year he will finish his last year at Meharry Medical College after which he hopes to be accepted into the Doctor of Public Health (DRPH) program at University of California at Berkeley. He is passionate about community and environmental health, preventive medicine, and health education and promotion.